

Question:

Can a Faculty Member grieve an MWA?

Answer:

Yes.

Limited grievable grounds, remember...

MWAs that would measure only hours spent in-class, and teaching contact days over the length of the agreement, which can be from one semester to three years in duration, for the purpose of averaging over the length of the MWA.

One can grieve AFTER the conclusion of the agreement; not during or before.

An MWA Agreement has variable duration, up to the length of the existing length of the Collective Agreement.

An aggrieved faculty could have to endure three years before they are allowed to grieve.
